MULTI-YEAR INTERDISCIPLINARY RESEARCH PROJECTS

- 2016–present WOUND, Study Center for Group Work cultivates behaviors that allow groups to gather together more carefully. The Center offers trainings in practices of listening, attention, and collaboration using sculptural tools for communication that have been made by local artists. After a successful pilot at Cooper Union (curated by Stamatina Gregory) with critical acclaim from the New York Times, Artforum, and Art in America, Caroline Woolard is now establishing a partnership with the New York Public Library to bring the study center to communities throughout the city.
<http://woundstudycenter.com>
- 2015–present NYC Real Estate Investment Cooperative exists to secure permanently affordable space for cultural, cooperative, and civic use in New York City. Following an educational event convened by Woolard, NYCREIC has over 350 members learning together and building power together.
<http://nycreic.com>

- 2013–present BFAMFAPhD is a group of artists, curators, technologists, and designers who are concerned about the impact of rent, debt, and precarity on culture in the 21st century. Founded by Woolard in 2013, this group has received international attention from policy-makers, administrators, art critics, and students.
<http://bfamfaphd.com>
- 2009–2015 Trade School is a self-organized learning platform that runs on barter. Students pay teachers with barter items rather than money, making space for mutual aid and reciprocal, radical pedagogy. Co-founded by Woolard in New York in 2009, Trade School is now a global network of barter-based schools, with thirty local chapters supporting one another, from Quito to Tokyo.
